Inflammatory Cytokines as New Therapeutic Targets

Message from the Guest Editors

It is generally known that inflammatory responses are accompanied by the regulation of autoimmune diseases, infectious diseases, and cancers by the immune system. In this process, excessive production of inflammatory cytokine by inflammatory immune cells that mediate inflammatory reactions is known to make the disease get worse. Therefore, research regarding immunomodulating molecules, including monoclonal antibodies and small chemical compounds, is needed to regulate the production and function of inflammatory cytokines in this regard. In this Special Issue, we will deal with research on the regulation of inflammatory immune cells and various kinds of inflammatory cytokines produced by these cells. Reviews and original papers discussing these points are welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Because of your expertise in the field of drug sciences, I kindly invite you to consider publishing your current work, in the form of a research article or a review, in the open access electronic journal Pharmaceuticals. Pharmaceuticals is characterized by an active editorial board and a dynamic editorial staff. Manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a final decision is provided to authors within 4–6 weeks after submission. Papers are published on the web immediately after acceptance. For details on the submission process or any other matter, please do not hesitate to contact us.

We hope to handle your contribution to Pharmaceuticals soon.
