Feature Papers

Message from the Guest Editor

We plan to publish a Special Issue on "Feature Papers" to give a broader overview of the area related to new drug development and the search for new therapeutic options. Because of recent developments in targeted therapy, cell therapy/gene therapy, and genomics/proteomics, this area is expanding very rapidly. We therefore would like to give readers the latest information to help our collective understanding. We are looking for top quality articles that showcase topics in the journal's scope. Authors will consist of editorial board members and leading investigators invited by the editorial board. Articles could be either original research article or review article.
