Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Excipients based on lipid materials have attracted considerable interest in the design of dosage forms. Lipids are often low-melting-point materials and poorly water-wettable too. Hence, they are amendable to several manufacturing technologies and are used in several types of dosage forms. This Special Issue hopes to present novel innovations in lipid-based dosage forms and applications involving lipids in manufacturing processes. Research on various technologies to produce lipid-based dosage forms are welcome.

We look forward to your submission for this Special Issue.

Best regards,
