Advances in Drug Delivery Systems for Targeted Neurological Therapies

Message from the Guest Editor

The delivery of drugs to the central nervous system poses one of the greatest challenges in treating brain disorders. A major obstacle is the blood-brain barrier (BBB), which prevents drugs from crossing into the brain. Numerous clinical trials for various neurological disorders have failed over the past decades due to the inadequate concentration of drugs in the brain caused by this limitation. Novel brain targeting approaches are thus urgently required to overcome this barrier. This Special Issue aims to provide a collection of new studies, robust reviews and innovative perspectives that could contribute to advancing drug delivery systems for targeted neurological therapies. I look forward to receiving your contributions.
