Medicinal and Aromatic Plants Extracts as Well as Essential Oils Applied in the Prevention and Treatment of Various Diseases

Message from the Guest Editors

Nature has always been, and still is, a source of foods and ingredients that are beneficial to human health. Inadequate supply of drugs, the prohibitive cost of treatments, side effects of several synthetic drugs and the development of resistance to currently used drugs for infectious diseases have led to increased emphasis on the use of plant materials as a source of medicines for a wide variety of human ailments. Treatment with medicinal plants is considered very safe as there are no or minimal side effects. This Special Issue aims to collect contributions, research papers, and reviews related to the possibility of using medicinal and aromatic plant extracts, as well as their essential oils in reducing the damage to various tissues and organs of diabetic patients and diabetics that occurs as accompanying chronic complications.
