Metal and Carbon Nanomaterials for Pharmaceutical Applications

Message from the Guest Editor

We are pleased to invite you to share your experience and knowledge in the form of high-quality empirical research papers. This Special Issue focuses on the latest advances and original works not only on silver-based nanocomplexes but general metal-carbon nanocomplexes as pharmaceutical formulations and their applications, including novel or improved ways of preparation, resulting toxicity changes or better biocompatibility, pharmacokinetics, anti-inflammatory and anticancer properties and the other therapeutic features. Above all, the results of in vitro and in vivo research on specific nanomedicinal applications of metal-carbon nanocomplexes in the treatment of various diseases would be appreciated.
