CNS Drug Delivery: Recent Advances and Challenges

Message from the Guest Editor

The central nervous system (CNS) consists of the brain and spinal cord. It is a critical target for treating various neurological disorders, such as Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease, etc. However, physiological barriers, especially the blood-brain barrier (BBB), pose a significant challenge for drug delivery to the CNS, limiting the efficacy of many therapeutic agents. This Special Issue aims to focus on the latest developments and challenges in CNS drug delivery, including, but not limited to, novel drug delivery systems, nanotechnology, formulations, and targeted drug delivery strategies. We welcome the submission of articles related to CNS drug delivery and invite researchers to publish their original research or review articles. We look forward to receiving your contributions.
