

Special Issue

Tuberculosis Vaccine Research and Development

Message from the Guest Editor

Tuberculosis is one of the biggest threats to the health, welfare, and productivity of humans and animals globally. It causes more human deaths than any other infectious organism. This Special Issue will highlight current research activities in the research and development of tuberculosis vaccines. We particularly encourage submissions relating to vaccine formulation (such as DNA, subunit, recombinant, and nano- and micro-particles) and different delivery modalities (such as mucosal, aerosol, transdermal) and the evaluation of their safety and efficacy in animal models and target species.
