Digital Health in Pharmacy Practice and Education

Message from the Guest Editors

The focus of this Special Issue, “Digital Health in Pharmacy Practice and Education”, is to present on the rapidly evolving field of digital health in pharmacy. Digital systems have revolutionised global healthcare and how health professionals provide patient care in their day-to-day practice. Digital health education for students and practitioners is now a key focus area for pharmacy. Advancements in the use of digital health technologies and data science in health, including innovative practices, models and approaches, both in clinical settings as well as in education, are instrumental in shaping the present and the future of healthcare. We invite researchers to submit their work on topics across all areas of Pharmacy Education and Practice within the context of digital health. Review articles, original research papers, and communications are all welcome.
