

Special Issue

European Conference on Health Workforce Education and Research 2018

Message from the Guest Editors

We are delighted to partner with the International Network of Health Workforce Education to publish a Special Issue on “Leadership, Communication and Intercultural Education for Health Professionals” which is aligned to the theme of the European Conference on Health Workforce Education and Research, Athens 2018 (<http://inhwe.org/athens-2018>). These interconnected topics are at the very top of political and research agendas. Health professionals are dealing with constant changes to both the health systems they work in and the patients they serve. Equipping the health workforce with the skills to deal with this change is of the utmost importance for healthcare educators, researchers and policy makers. Leadership, Communication and Intercultural Education are three distinct but interrelated topics that are assisting health professionals adapt to their changing environment. All the conference papers, if accepted, will be published in Pharmacy with article processing fees fully waived.
