Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Polymeric films and their composites are already widely used in the field of industry and medicine. Research on and development of new polymeric film materials are essential to support the growing interest in film technology.

This Special Issue on “Multifunctional Advanced Polymeric Films” focuses on recent progress in the development of polymeric films, including but not limited to the synthesis, fabrication, modification, characterization, functionalization, grafting of polymer film, and their applications. Both research articles and reviews on the latest research are welcomed.
