Message from the Guest Editor

Sustainability has been recognized by both scientists and industrials as a priority research field, thus establishing itself as a standalone discipline in the last two decades. All chemists, engineers, physics, biologists, and materials scientists targeting the vast diversity of topics and subtopics related to the design and application of novel Sustainable Monomers, Catalysts, Polymers, and Polymer-Based Materials demonstrating sustainability aspects in their projects are welcome to send us their works.

Topics of particular interest for this Special Issue devoted to Sustainable Monomers, Catalysts, Polymers, and Polymer-Based Materials include but are not limited to:

- Design, synthesis, and characterization;
- Natural renewable resources;
- Wastes as reactants, reinforcements, and/or fillers;
- Bio-based products, catalysts, polymers, blends, composites, hybrid materials; and

Finally, both original research and review papers are welcome. Thus, I am delighted to invite you to contribute your work as a full paper, letter, communication, review, or perspective article.
