

Special Issue

Natural Additive-Enhanced Polymer Composites

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue focuses on polymer composites enhanced with natural additives, reflecting the growing interest in sustainable and eco-conscious material solutions. We welcome the submission of contributions that explore recent progress made in the synthesis, processing, and characterization of polymer composites modified with natural additives. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to, interfacial interactions, morphology, mechanical behavior, thermal properties, and long-term performance. Advances in using natural resources to enhance composite functionality and support circular material design are especially encouraged. By highlighting new approaches and challenges in this dynamic field, we hope to foster discussion and innovation in the development of more sustainable polymer-based materials.
