

Special Issue

Biodegradable Polymers to Biomedical and Packaging Applications, 2nd Edition

Message from the Guest Editors

We are pleased to announce the release of the Special Issue titled "Biodegradable Polymers for Biomedical and Packaging Applications—2nd Edition", following the success of its first edition. Biodegradable polymers are now an important part of every sector (nanotechnology, chemistry, agriculture, etc.). However, their main application is related to biomedical science and packaging applications. Scientists in these two fields are particularly interested in biodegradable polymers, because they are harmless to the environment. In this Special Issue, current trends in polymer synthesis, analysis, and physicochemical studies are highlighted and discussed. This Special Issue will collate novel studies related to biodegradable polymers for biomedical and packaging applications. It is important to consider different methods to improve the properties of polymer-based materials and increase their applicability in industry. Thanks to the open access platform of this journal, we can count on a wider audience of readers of the fruits of our research efforts.
