Selected Papers from "ECIS 2017"

Message from the Guest Editors

The annual European Colloid and Interface Society conference is a major event for the colloid science community, and this is the 31st conference in a series of successful meetings, of which the primary goal is to bring together all major disciplines of colloids and interfaces, enabling participants to exchange knowledge, communicate to each other the results of their recent research, and to network with colleagues for new collaborations. ECIS 2017 will cover fundamental and applied advances in the fields of interfaces, dispersed systems, wetting, complex fluids, micro- and nano-engineered materials, upconversion nanoparticles, ion specific effects, self-assembly of surfactants, polymers and proteins, and advances in theories and instrumentation.
