

Special Issue

Advanced Polymer-Based Materials for Dental Applications

Message from the Guest Editor

Polymer-based materials have been used in dentistry for a long time, especially in restorative dentistry. Polymer materials can be applied in the composite filling for advanced restoration, dental implants, regenerative dentistry, and dental drug delivery. Polymers are playing major, important roles in contemporary, 3D digital dentistry and its future. Therefore, we are organizing a Special Issue on recent developments, fabrication technologies, and applications of polymer-based materials in dentistry. Researchers, scientists, and clinicians are encouraged to contribute original research papers, clinical trials or reports, reviews, and meta-analyses that will promote the continuation of polymer-based materials application in dentistry.
