Bioplastics

Message from the Guest Editors

Bioplastics, encompassing both biobased and biodegradable polymers, are at the forefront of sustainable materials research. With increasing global emphasis on reducing our environmental impact, these materials offer transformative potential across industries. This Special Issue will explore the latest advances in biobased and biodegradable polymers, including their synthesis, processing, functionalization, and applications across diverse industries. Topics of interest include the following:

- The design and application of bioplastics in packaging, agriculture, and industrial uses;
- Reactive extrusion processing, polymer blends, and recyclable bio composites;
- Recycling-friendly bioplastics and strategies for closed-loop recycling systems;
- The valorization of waste materials for the sustainable production of bioplastics;
- Explorations of bioplastics for high-performance, durable applications.
