Fiber-Reinforced Polymer Composites: Manufacturing and Performance II

Message from the Guest Editors

Further to the success of the Special Issue of Polymers “Fiber-Reinforced Polymer Composites: Manufacturing and Performance”, we are delighted to reopen the Special Issue, now entitled “Fiber-Reinforced Polymer Composites: Manufacturing and Performance II”. This Special Issue deals with various aspects of the science and technology of composite materials, including the use of various types of fibers to reinforce the polymeric matrix. The range of potential topics includes the design and manufacture of reinforcing fibers, novel architectures and concepts, advanced manufacturing processes, soluble and insoluble additives, material characterization, microstructural characterization of the reinforced composites, novel mechanical testing methods, post-processing of reinforced composites, finite-element modelling of reinforced composites, and the durability and long-term performance prediction of the mechanical and physical behavior of composites in service.
