Open Science: Developments and Disinformation Regarding Scientific Information

Message from the Guest Editors

In an era of rapid digital communication and open science initiatives, ensuring the reliability of scientific information is paramount. Open science, with its emphasis on transparency, accessibility, and collaboration, holds the potential to revolutionize research. However, it also faces challenges, particularly when scientific findings are misinterpreted, manipulated, or weaponized to spread misinformation. This call for papers seeks to explore the intersection of open science and the fight against scientific disinformation, encouraging innovative approaches to safeguard the integrity of science while promoting its democratization. We welcome submissions addressing, but not limited to, the following topics:

- Open Science Developments
- Disinformation and Scientific Communication
- Quantification and Impact
