

Special Issue

Overview on Today's AI Tools for Authors

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue seeks to compile cutting-edge research on AI tools that support authors across disciplines, with a focus on their applications in digital publishing, digital humanities, and digital academic practices. We welcome original research articles, review articles, and case studies addressing (but not limited to) the following themes:

- AI-powered writing assistants;
- Tools for automated literature review, citation analysis, and metadata organization;
- AI in digital publishing: peer review enhancement, plagiarism detection, and manuscript formatting;
- Applications of AI in digital humanities;
- Data visualization and storytelling tools for academic communication;
- Ethical considerations in AI tool use;
- User experiences and challenges in adopting AI tools for scholarly writing;
- AI-driven collaboration platforms for multi-author research projects;
- Future trends in AI tool development for academic authors.

We look forward to your contributions that deepen our understanding of how AI is transforming scholarly practices and enabling more efficient, inclusive, and innovative research communication.
