Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The field of philosophical theology has taken many turns in the past few decades. In addition to classical theism, process theology, open theism, analytic philosophy, and theology, what has been termed theistic personalism has become popular. This Special Issue allows scholars with various viewpoints to share developments in their work and research to help promote the advancement of scholarship in philosophical theology, as well as to promote the awareness of advances in the field.

As such, this issue will explore how philosophy and theology intersect in such areas as God's existence, nature and attributes, religious epistemology, etc. Further, such intersections will be explored from various viewpoints, such as those mentioned above. This Special Issue will develop, promote, and advance current scholarship in the literature by allowing the various views to be better explored, clarified, and critiqued.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
