Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

We are seeking articles for this Special Issue from scholars and other researchers of shamanism who are active in a variety of disciplines, such as ethnography, religious studies, anthropology, archaeology, art history, sociology, psychology, philosophy, and others. We strongly encourage papers that both focus on the continuing phenomenon of shamanism in China and contextualize the contemporary practice of Chinese shamanism in a comparative context. We wish to promote critical thinking and theoretically oriented approaches that further our understanding of the revitalization of shamanism in contemporary China.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
