Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

In the past decade, the study of Chinese religions has flourished across the globe. By raising new issues and examining new materials, scholars have made tremendous contributions to the study of both traditional Chinese religions and their modern and contemporary developments. This Special Issue will move forward to push new thinking about the history of religions in China, and their rise, fall, and return.

China is a multi-lingual, multi-religious, and multi-ethnic nation. We seek contributions that could bridge dialogues among scholars from various national, ethnical, gender, linguistic, and religious backgrounds.

This Special Issue aims to bring together a group of young scholars who aim to open the new frontiers of Chinese religious history by exploring old themes with new materials and raising new issues with old materials, or both.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
