Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue focuses on the growth of Indigenous churches in Africa, particularly over the last few decades. Africa has been the home of the earliest forms of human civilization and it also reflects some of the world's most complex and colorful cultural, linguistic, and historical diversity. This call for papers welcomes papers that discuss the growth of these churches over recent decades and ways in which African religiosity and culture are constantly evolving and being remade. In addition, we encourage research that supplements existing academic literature, particularly in the wake of increasing poverty, globalization and privatization, neo-colonial militarization, Earth heating, climate instability, prolonged drought, the COVID-19 pandemic, and other environmental and health issues in the early 21st century on the African continent.
