Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The Jewish people in North America represent nearly half of all the Jews in the world today. Although a small minority within the American population, they enjoy a high social, cultural, and economic profile. They have also maintained a long tradition of forming communities, voluntary agencies, civic and philanthropic organizations. Our issue will explore particular challenges that Jews have and are facing in American society, with particular attention to inter-group relations, religious diversity, identity, antisemitism, and the spatial integration (or separation) that characterizes their lives.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
