Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The under-explored topic of the nexus between religion and genocide in both its institutional (churches, mosques, agencies, etc.) and intellectual (philosophical and theological) settings is worthy of a much fuller exploration and investigation in the field of Genocide Studies where the predominant academic disciplines have been history, political science, and law. Specifically, scholars of religion and religious studies have been among the last to sit at the table and enter into the conversation. The Special Issue of Religions is a contribution towards that end.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
