

Special Issue

Constructive Interdisciplinary Approaches to Pauline Theology

Message from the Guest Editor

The field of Pauline studies has undergone significant transformations in recent decades, propelled by fresh interpretive frameworks, interdisciplinary methodologies, and growing engagement with contemporary issues. This special issue, Constructive Interdisciplinary Approaches to Pauline Theology, seeks to explore these emerging trajectories by welcoming contributions that focus upon interdisciplinary approaches to Pauline theology—that is, bringing Paul's theology into dialogue with law, medicine, genetics, politics, sociology, cognitive linguistics, and so on. The aim of this special issue is to foster a vibrant and multifaceted interdisciplinary engagement with Paul's theology, and by doing so, illuminate its ongoing significance not only within the Christian imagination, but even within broader societal discourse.

This special issue also encourages focused theological investigations into key Pauline themes (pneumatology, ecclesiology, soteriology), so long as a clear interdisciplinary approach is taken.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
