

Special Issue

Religions and Society: Between Navigating Secularism and Lived Religion

Message from the Guest Editors

We invite scholars to submit articles for a Special Issue entitled “Religions and Society: Between Navigating Secularism and Lived Religion”, which aims to explore the evolving relationship between religion and society in the context of global socio-cultural, ideological, and technological transformations.

This Special Issue seeks to analyze the complex nature of contemporary religiosity by examining the tensions between the sacred and the secular, institutions and personal experiences, offline and online life, and humanity and technology. We aim to explore how these dynamics are transforming believers’ lifestyles, shaping social imaginaries, and influencing how faith communities and religious institutions respond to the challenge of renewing the experience and expression of faith today.

We invite empirical and theoretical contributions based on qualitative, quantitative, comparative, or conceptual research. Manuscripts should be accessible to an interdisciplinary readership, including scholars in sociology, anthropology, religious studies, media studies, theology, philosophy, cultural studies, and communication studies.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
