The Transformation of Pilgrimage Studies

Message from the Guest Editors

The rapidly expanding interdisciplinary field of pilgrimage studies covers not just religious pilgrimage but other key forms such as secular pilgrimage, spiritual pilgrimage, dark tourism, and the relationship between travel, tourism, and pilgrimage. The diversity and complexity of pilgrimage practices are also apparent at more local shrines as members of trans-local communities return to their native countries during holidays or re-settle. The growth of spiritual and secular pilgrimage and religious tourism adds to this diversity and complexity. Battlefield tourism and military pilgrimage illustrate the importance of cultural heritage, while recently, the pandemic has also challenged our beliefs in "normality" but also opened up new avenues for exploration. In this Special Issue, we want to examine intellectual contributions and debates involving the study of pilgrimage (religious, spiritual, secular, etc.)

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
