

Special Issue

Religiosity and Human Flourishing: Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Well-Being, Mental Health, and Meaning

Message from the Guest Editor

The aim of this Special Issue is to advance an interdisciplinary understanding of how religiosity is associated with human flourishing. It seeks to integrate empirical and theoretical approaches from psychology, sociology, theology, philosophy and public health; clarify conceptual frameworks of both religiosity and flourishing; examine mechanisms and pathways through which religiosity influences flourishing; attend to diversity and context; critically engage tensions and paradoxes. Research areas may include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Psychological dimensions of well-being and meaning-making;
- Theological models of human-flourishing;
- Philosophical explorations of religiosity and flourishing;
- Cross-cultural and comparative studies of religiosity and flourishing;
- Negative or ambivalence associations with religiosity and well-being;
- Clinical, pastoral, public health or community interventions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
