

Special Issue

Religion in Transition—Cases from Ancient Egypt

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue will address ancient Egyptian religion in transition based on current archaeological fieldwork, with special focus on non-elite and peripheral religion, and welcomes contributions ranging from the Predynastic to the Roman period in Egypt. For this, we seek submissions dealing with the changing nature of religion or religion's relation with societal transition.

'Religion' is here interpreted broadly, incorporating any aspects of beliefs and practices, public and domestic, and based on recent archaeological fieldwork. Reinterpretations of older material are equally welcome. By focusing on less-explored subjects and new empirical material, the articles in this volume will bring novel insights into religious aspects of societal transition and vice versa. It will complement standard literature and excavation reports on Egyptian religion in general, ancient life in the periphery, industrial communities and borderscapes, and societal transformations overall.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
