The Virgin Mary in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance: Devotion and Iconography

Message from the Guest Editor

You are kindly invited to submit your articles to this Special Issue. This Special Issue will explore some of the various ways in which the Virgin Mary was venerated and represented within Christianity during the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. During that long millennium, the figure of Mary acquired an increasingly relevant role among Christians as virginal Mother of God the Son, perpetual Virgin, Queen of Heaven, and helper and mediator between God and men, especially in the Last Judgment. Based, above all, on the Christological and Mariological dogmas established by the Church in the successive Ecumenical Councils of Nicaea I (325), Ephesus (431), Chalcedon (451) and Constantinople II (553), the cult of the Virgin was rapidly consolidated in Christianity, expressing itself in a varied panoply of Marian dedications, numerous religious festivals, a multitude of hymns, prayers and liturgical services in her honor, as well as in an endearing popular devotion to the "Mother of God and our mother".
