Faith in Motion: Christian Education and Faith Formation in Contexts of Migration and Displacement

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue explores how Christian communities, educators, and theologians engage the formation of faith in the lives of people on the move—refugees, immigrants, asylum seekers, internally displaced persons, and others living in conditions of mobility and marginalization. Migration is not only a sociopolitical or economic phenomenon but a profoundly theological and educational one. As individuals and families navigate dislocation, border regimes, and cultural displacement, faith becomes both a source of resilience and a contested site of identity, belonging, and transformation. However, much theological discourse has remained disconnected from the lived realities of migrants and their spiritual journeys. This Special Issue aims to bridge that gap by focusing on Christian education and faith formation in migrant contexts, especially as they intersect with trauma, intercultural identity, ecclesial belonging, and social justice.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
