

Special Issue

Communication in Abrahamic Religions

Message from the Guest Editors

Religious traditions are primary social contexts and drivers for communication and social engagement across humanity's full moral range, ranging from care to violence. The Abrahamic traditions have been especially inspirational and influential. This Special Issue honors the memory of Maribel Landrau, M.A.T., our beloved colleague who made significant contributions to launching the Communication in Abrahamic Religions project. Our scope highlights the intersection between Religion and the Humanities, including the fields of Communication, Rhetoric, Inter-Religious Studies, Inter-Faith Dialogue, the Philosophy of Religion, the Sociology of Religion, Religious Ethics, Theology, Scriptural Studies, Hermeneutics, and Religious Peace Studies. We hope that this Special Issue will stimulate new research and inform scholars seeking to understand how Abrahamic communication patterns generate meaning and perform value. We look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
