Global Catholicism

Message from the Guest Editors

Global Catholicism is a field of study with diverse roots in missiology, ecclesiology, and practical theology as well as contemporary social scientific and historical research. While related to the study of World Christianity and religion more generally, the distinctive ecclesiological features of Catholicism open possibilities related to Catholic theology, including understandings originating or with certain affinities within particular world regions or localities. We seek papers that would expand our understanding of both the field and discipline of Global Catholicism, areas of scholarship that have both a sociological and theological dimension and which therefore may be best described as practical theological. Papers may focus on contemporary conversations within Global Catholicism, regional or local ecclesiological developments or histories, comparative studies of other traditions or between historical periods of instantiations of Catholicism, and related but broader methodological or theological questions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
