

Special Issue

Folk Religion in the Ancient Levant and Mediterranean

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will focus on the Western Levant and Eastern Mediterranean worlds from the Late Bronze through the end of the Iron II (for the Western Levant) or Archaic (for the Eastern Mediterranean) Ages. We hope that this wide net will allow scholars to work in areas where the evidence is most illuminating and to enable interdisciplinary discussion about how to productively study this difficult topic. For the project, we are seeking papers, ideally self-conscious about method, on any aspect of folk practice, in realms including religious textual genres, behaviors and products, symbols explicit or implicit, and beliefs. Studies with a focus on the material correlates of folk religion recovered through archaeology are particularly welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
