A Transdisciplinary Approach to the Study of Islam and Islamicate

Message from the Guest Editor

The areas of consideration include, but not limited to:

- The origins of Islam and the social and historical context in which it emerged,
- The formation of Islamic religious traditions,
- Islamic institutions including law, philosophical foundations, and political order,
- Education, the transmission of knowledge, and Muslim societies in the Islamic Golden Age,
- Islamic civilisational development,
- Islamic contribution to modernity,
- The impact of colonialism on the Muslim world.

The aim is to employ transdisciplinary approaches and social scientific analyses to understand fundamental concepts of Islam, Muslim religious diversity, and the role Muslim religious ideas and institutions play in Muslim communities around the world.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
