Buddhist Architecture in East Asia

Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues:

This Issue focuses on the Buddhist architecture in Fast Asia. Over the last two thousand years since its legendary introduction to the Han court in the first century. Buddhism has transformed not only people's intellectual and practical lives but also the built environments of East Asia. From Mount Kunlun to the Japanese Isles, from the Mongolian prairie to the coasts of the South China Sea, mountains were carved for devotion and hermitic practices, cities were rebuilt for new religious life, and new architectural types were created to honor the relics of the enlightened ones and to cope with the evolving religion as it was gradually integrated with the local cultures. The articles in this Issue are aimed to capture the scope and diversity of Buddhist architecture in East Asia, and at the same time. to reflect the front lines of research in the field.
