

Special Issue

Preaching in Multicultural Contexts

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue deals with culture broadly, including racial and ethnic cultures, intergenerational cultures, technology and digital cultures, and religious and spiritual cultures, and explores this through interdisciplinary studies with various social sciences, arts, and biblical and theological studies. Each article engages in deep theological and homiletical conversation, focusing on the following questions: What is the relationship between preaching and culture? What are the theological, ethical, and homiletical issues emerging from our multicultural context of preaching, especially from the author's particular cultural context? What are new homiletical approaches, ideas, and methods appropriate to preach good news in relation to these issues? Thus, the scope of research for this topic has three areas: (1) the theology of preaching, (2) hermeneutics for preaching, and (3) communication methods for preaching from a multicultural point of view. We invite you to write an article focusing on at least one of these areas.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
