

Special Issue

Religious Ethics and Theology in Contemporary Human Life

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue seeks to highlight how social imagination can facilitate meaningful engagement with themes in religious ethics that are in dialogue with theology and verse versa.

Some relevant areas that manuscripts submitted to this Special Issue may cover include, but are not limited to, the following:

The ethical grounding of theological anthropologies relevant to the contemporary era.

The theological grounding of artificial intelligence (AI) and its ethical implications.

The theological basis for care of migrants and refugees in today's world.

Reimagining the ethics of foreign aid and humanitarian support in an era of climate crises.

Interfaith praxes of love and their theological implications.

The theology on human flourishing and its ethical significance across religious traditions.

The interconnections between normative ethical theories and culture in the face of global diversity.

Political systems and their grounding within religious ethics.

How can religious ethics inform economic systems and practices today and how theology can guide this process?

Religious ethics and the retrieval of memory in shaping a better world, and theology's role in this project.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
