Evangelicalism: New Directions in Scholarship

Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues: We invite you to participate in a special fascicle of Religions focusing on new directions in scholarship about evangelicalism, edited by Edward Blum and Randall Balmer. We are especially eager to feature the work of younger, emerging scholars. More than a generation ago, a cohort of academics established the paradigm of study almost exclusively on evangelicalism within the Reformed Protestant tradition. Although their scholarship was pathbreaking, its scope was also limited. In assembling a cohort of younger scholars, we hope to broaden our understanding of evangelicalism with attention to such issues as the environment, economics, sex, race, ethnicity, justice, popular culture, the digital age, and LGBT rights.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
