

Special Issue

Religious Communities in Exile and Diaspora

Message from the Guest Editor

The focus of this special issue will be on religious communities living in exile or diaspora, how they conceive of their situation and relationship to the homeland, and unique ritual practices, communal narratives, theological conceptualizations, and institutional structures developed in exile and diaspora. Topics may include anthropological depictions of contemporary religious communities in exile or diaspora, historic representations of religious communities in diaspora or exile, analyses of literary reflections on the condition of exile or diaspora, theological constructions regarding the status and purpose of diaspora or exile, psychological or social theory as it applies to a particular religious community in diaspora or exile or to the general condition of diaspora or exile across religions and cultures, or any related methodology associated with this topic.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
