Emerging Trends in Congregational Engagement and Leadership

Message from the Guest Editor

The study of congregational life and leadership is an interdisciplinary endeavor that draws upon sociological, anthropological, political, historical, ecclesial, and other frameworks and methods. As such, we invite research articles and reviews from a variety of disciplines that address any aspect of the Special Issue topic, including (but not limited to) the following:

- How individual congregations are responding to issues, trends, or events that have impacted them, their local and/or regional communities, or beyond;
- Patterns of engagement or response across multiple congregations to particular local and/or global phenomena;
- Congregational leader perceptions of, and/or responses to, present issues, trends, or events;
- Emerging models, practices, or attributes of religious leadership that elicit congregational responses to, or engagements of, local and/or global phenomena.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
