

Special Issue

Ethics and Religion: Education towards Religious and Human Values

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue of Religions is dedicated to the relationship of ethics with religion within an educational perspective. The ethical, religious and values formation of the contemporary human being is a very important aspect not only for the Catholic Church, but also for society at large. Due to the process of secularisation, this formation is facing a myriad of challenges which need to be addressed not only to safeguard ethical teaching in itself, but also to safeguard the interest of human beings who are the front-office users who suffer most when ethical formation is lacking. Consequently, the aim of this Special Issue is specifically aimed at instilling an awareness on this state of affairs which will help in seeking to specify these difficulties and to propose timely solutions to them.

This theme needs to be considered from a very broad perspective and should include all ethical education in view of education in both religious values and in human values around the world.

I look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
