

Special Issue

Buddhism and Medicine from an Interdisciplinary and Global Historical Perspective

Message from the Guest Editors

To address the rich layers of medical knowledge embedded in the Buddhist literature and the complex history of Buddhism's cross-border and cross-cultural impacts through the medium of medical science, this special issue invites interdisciplinary study of Buddhism and medicine by focusing on subjects that include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Buddhist medical practices in India;
- Buddhist medical practices in Central Asia;
- Buddhist medical practices in Southeast Asia;
- Buddhist medical practices in China;
- Buddhist medical practices in Korea and Japan;
- Cross-border studies of Buddhist medical practices;
- The role of Buddhist medicine in the formation, development, and transformation of East Asian societies;
- Modernization of Buddhist medical practices;
- Sociological studies on Buddhist medicine;
- Relationship between Buddhist medical practices and the spread of Buddhism;
- Buddhist medical literature;
- Bhaiṣajyaguru-related texts and images;
- Bhaiṣajyaguru faith;
- Significant figures in the history of Buddhist medicine.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
