Science, Religion, and Health— Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Human Flourishing

Message from the Guest Editors

We are pleased to invite you to contribute to this Special Issue of Religions on “Science, Religion, and Health—Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Human Flourishing.”

This Special Issue aims to bring together interdisciplinary perspectives on how science and religion engage with health and well-being in their broadest sense. In line with the scope of Religions, we are particularly interested in how religious traditions—Eastern and Western, ancient and contemporary—interact with scientific and medical understandings of health. We welcome contributions that reflect on the conceptual foundations of health, examine concrete practices of care, and highlight points of convergence or divergence between religious and scientific approaches. By fostering dialogue across disciplines such as philosophy, theology, ethics, medicine, cultural studies, and other fields, this Special Issue seeks to enrich our understanding of health as a deeply human, social, and spiritual concern.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
