Latter-day Saint Theology and the Environment

Message from the Guest Editors

We look for papers that will explore these and other topics as articulated by and interpreted within Latter-Day Saint belief and practice:

- Latter-Day Saint theologies of land, material wealth, and prosperity;
- the environmental significance of divine embodiment;
- agency of matter;
- the ethics of climate change;
- the ethics of an end-times or "latter-day" religion; the usefulness and challenges of understandings of apocalypse;
- the Word of Wisdom as a guide to sustainable living and point of intersection with other ecological aspects of other religious dietary laws;
- the place and stature of animals and the value of biodiversity;
- sustainability and the Latter-Day Saint church as a developer of land and builder of chapels, temples, and schools;
- environmental ethics in the uniquely Latter-Day Saint sacred texts;
- race and gender in Latter-Day Saint theology in relationship to environmental care;
- nature and spirit in Latter-Day Saint thought and practice;
- Latter-Day Saint creation narratives and Ecotheology.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions. Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
