

Special Issue

Contemporary Changes and Transformations in the Islamic World

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue focuses on changes and transformations in the Islamic world that have taken place over the last few decades, including religious ideas, rituals, movements, communities, and so on. The goal of this issue is to present readers with interdisciplinary scholarship, utilizing approaches from the humanities and social sciences to provide a deep understanding of contemporary developments in the Islamic World and, by extension, minority Muslim Communities in the West. The participant authors can be specialized in religious studies, sociology, history, anthropology, political science, law, media studies, or other disciplines, so long as they focus their articles on topics related to religious changes and transformations. Articles may highlight changes and transformations in the Islamic world in general, or in specific countries or regions. Among the important themes that are addressed in the Special Issue are tradition and reform, secularism and the application of Islamic law, in addition to questions of religious leadership and authority.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
