Philosophy of Religion: The Metaphysics of Theism

Message from the Guest Editor

There are three questions we can ask about the relationship between metaphysics and theism:

- Can metaphysical theories of causation, modality, space, time and mind, and so on, provide an understanding of the nature of God?
- Conversely, can God's nature provide a metaphysical grounding for some of these concepts?
- Does the metaphysics of theism make sense only within a realist, literalist understanding of theistic discourse, or has it a role to play in analogical, fictionalist, or apophatic understandings?

Contributions are invited for this special issue on any of these questions. For further reading, please visit the Special Issue Website.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
