

Special Issue

Religion and Modern Jewish Thought: Volume II

Message from the Guest Editor

The volume is conceived as a symposium in which the issues delineated in the above summary will be addressed. The articles may consider the thoughts of representatives of all tendencies in modern Jewish thought: Reform, Orthodox, Hasidic, Ultra-Orthodox and those without a denominational affiliation; the issues considered may also apply to adjustments of Judaism to questions of gender and sexual orientation. The genres of the reflections on Judaism under the conditions of modernity may also include belles lettres, poetry, and cinema. Nor is the purview of the symposium restricted to European Jewish thought. It is hoped that the thematic parameters symposium will provide a broad and nuanced discussion of the varied expressions of modern Jewish religious thought.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
